Monsoon to hit Kerala coast 5 days ahead of usual: IMD

● Experts say the early onset not to impact progress

SANDIP DAS
New Delhi, May 10

THE SOUTHWEST MONSOON is likely to hit the Kerala coast on May 27, five days earlier than the usual onset date of June 1, the India Meteorological Department (IMD) said on Saturday. The forecast of early arrivals of monsoon comes with a model error of +/- 4 days.

Typically, the monsoon after onset over the Kerala coast in early June covers the entire country by July. These south-west monsoon rains gradually begins to recede from north India by mid-September.

“Current forecasts are not pointing towards any big factor that could significantly delay its further progress over southern and northeastern India,” Akshay Deoras, research scientist, National Centre for Atmospheric Science, University of Reading, UK, told FE. “It is not uncommon for the monsoon to reach Kerala before June 1,” he adds.

In 2022, monsoon touched down on the Kerala coast on May 29. The earliest onset date recorded this century is May 18, 2004. During the primary rainy season that spans between June-September every year, the country roughly receives 75% of its annual rainfall.

The adequate rainfall boost hopes of a robust agriculture sector output for a second year in row this year, as kharif sowing, which is to start with the rains, accounts for about 60% of the crop production. Monsoon rains also provide soil moisture for the winter (rabi) crops. Last month, IMD in its forecast predicted “above normal” monsoon rainfall during June-September this year, with 89% chance of the rains being in the “normal-to-excess” range. In terms of regional distribution, the Met department said ‘above-normal’ rainfall is expected over most parts of the country with the exception of northeast, parts of Bihar and Tamil Nadu.

“This year’s rainfall during the forthcoming monsoon season is likely to be 105% of the benchmark long period average (LPA) with an average error margin of +/- 5”, Mrutyunjay Mohapatra, DG, IMD had stated. Given the forecast of ‘above normal’ monsoon rainfall, the government has set a record target of 354.64 million tonne (MT) for food grains production in the 2025-26 crop year (July-June).

In 2024, the monsoon was ‘above normal’ with cumulative precipitation of 108% of LPA as predicted by the weather department initially. This was the best monsoon season in four years that was followed by a patchy ‘below normal’ monsoon of 94% of LPA in 2023.
